Six-Foot Turkey Day Marathon

This nation thrives on its traditions, and Thanksgiving is no different. Every year Americans gather to extol their thanks for the events in their lives over the previous year while attempting to relate to friendships established between pilgrims and Indians over four centuries ago. Most times people are not successful, often owing to the clean-up of history over the ages.

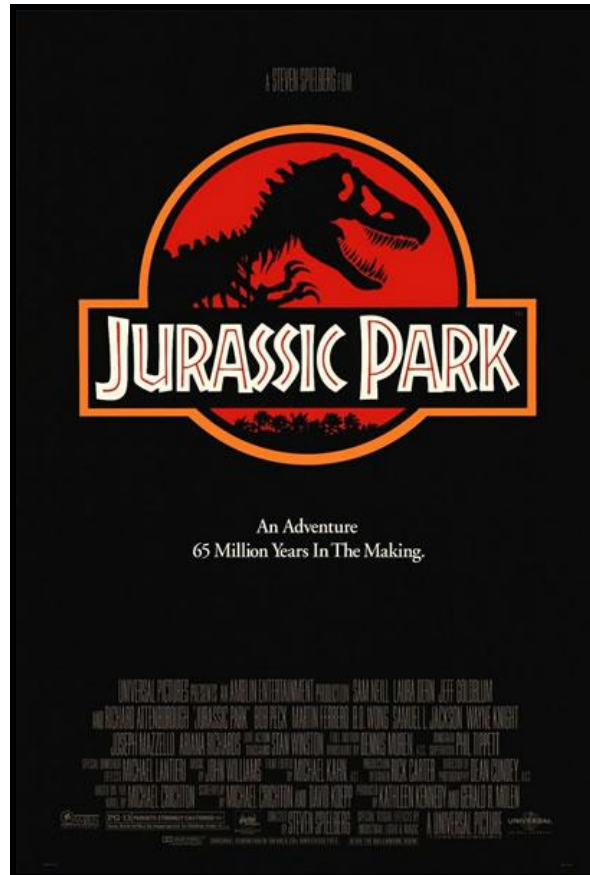

One tradition that has remained untouched by historical revisionists is an old Indian practice regarding the leaving of gifts in deference to the great dinosaur overlords who ruled the Earth back in the day. Thus, by remembering this tradition with a Jurassic Park marathon we are allowing the spirit of these Indian forebears to live forever.

The insignia for the Jurassic Park Six-Foot Turkey Day Marathon is essentially just the standard Jurassic Park crest, only with a rust-orange background rather than red. The orange is in keeping with the seasonal theme and the harvest, to which those saurian sacrifices were left so long ago.

Press Release

The official press release for the Six-Foot Turkey Day Marathon:

• • •

Sunday, November 18, 2007.

In October 2007 Mr. Charles Meyer sent a telegram proposing a post-thanksgiving movie day. His message is as follows:

I BELIEVE THAT THE NATIVE AMERICANS, AS A TRIBUTE TO THE BOUNTIFUL HARVEST, OFTEN OFFERED UP SACRIFICES TO THEIR DINOSAUR OVERLORDS THAT WERE GENETICALLY MODIFIED AND PLACED IN SOME SORT OF PARK AND SUBJECTED TO THE MAD RAVINGS OF A CHAOS THEORIST -STOP-

I BELIEVE IT WOULD BE IN GOOD TASTE TO BASE OUR WATCHINGS ON THEIR TRADITIONS -STOP-

So yea, it has been decreed (and yea it is good) that, beginning in 2007, during the weekend after that of Thanksgiving a complete Jurassic Park marathon will be held.

Depending on remaining time and interest after the JP movies we may, in proper Turkey Day fashion, wrap up the evening with terribly bad movies. This may be the most appropriate course of action.
